

AUDORA

Audora is the demi-goddess of forgiveness. She was born in a barn on the edge of a city named Idnar. Her mother was a mere mortal, facing poverty. Hence, Audora was never a whole God so she could not join her father on Mount Olympus. Audora's father was a cruel God that soon after Audora was born, he left them both to fend for themselves, in a very cruel reality.

When Audora was first born, her mother knew that life would be tough with hardly any money. Her mother, Ophelia decided the best thing to do was to teach Audora good virtues. Ophelia taught Audora to learn to forgive the unforgivable. So Audora forgave her father for his horrible deed and never thought of him again.

Audora grew up to be known as the problem solver. Whenever there was a conflict with the people in Idnar, she would teach her lesson of forgiveness and settle the argument.

One day, in a land vast and far away from Idnar, ~~Zues~~ Zues was hanging out on Mount Olympus, Lazily he layed on his bed watching people go on with their daily life, just as if it were television.

Suddenly ~~Zues~~ Zues saw something horrible. His wife Hera was kissing a man named Leon. In all his fury he jumped up from his bed and grabbed a lightning bolt ~~and~~ his body tensed with rage. Suddenly his eyes glazed to the color red. His hand shaking, he looked down at the ~~Thunderbolt~~ Thunderbolt, and concocted a plan that he would later put in action that day.

Zues summoned Hera with a bellow so loud that Hades, the God of the underworld could hear. Zues paced around the room as he waited for Hera,, he was impatient as a little child waiting for candy after dinner. Hera then suddenly stepped into Zues' chamber. Zues lumbered toward her with fury in his eyes as hot as seven suns.

"Hello, Zues! Honey I know not of why you are so angry, please, enlighten me and tell me why." Hera said slyly. Hera knew why he was mad, but she somehow always found a way to lie to Zues, and he was so gullible he would usually believe her.

"I saw you with that man, Leon." Zues said ~~furociosly~~ ^{FURIOUSLY}. "You betrayed me!!!! Zues bellowed.

"Zues! You know of nothing! That man forced me to kiss him! He threw himself upon me for no reason and just kissed me! All of those wretches in that town do. I am accountable for nothing." She said to him.

Now the truth was that, is that Hera actually loved this man, Leon. She ~~gad~~ ^{HAD} been seeing him for months.

"Hmmmmm...interesting." Zues contemplated. "Dismissed." He said to Hera.

SILENTLY
~~strongly~~

Hera ~~strongly~~ sighthly slipped out of Zues' chambers and ran to a secret garden. Hera felt horrible that she sold out Leon to save herself. She sobbed uncontrollably, for she knew that she made a choice that would damn her to never see Leon again...

Zues called from the heavens LEON!!! You have angered the gods, You and your ungodly town shall now face my wrath!" Zues screamed.

Zues threw down a huge Thunder bolt down ^{7.} n the town and it shook the earth so much that atlas' arms buckled. The crack in the ground got so huge that hundreds of people fell into it and plummeted to their gruesome death. Leon tried to run from the enormous crack in the earth, but he fell in as well to his death. Children cried, and mothers screamed, but Zues did not care, about his horrible deed. Zues got his revenge, but he did not care about how many lives would be ruined in the process.

When the earth shake was over, an angry mob cursed the heavens, and slurred Zues' name. For why should they worship a god that only plotted their demise?

Hermes heard about the awful tragedy and used his winged shoes to fly down to Audora. "Audora, Audora!" Hermes searched far and wide through the vast land of Idnar.

Audora heard his yells and called out, "I am here Hermes!" She called.

He flew down to meet Audora and told her all of the tragedy. Audora could not believe what Zues did! Zues, the mighty god that everyone prayed to, killed hundreds of people, just for revenge. Hermes asked her to please go down to Idnar and to teach the people her lesson of forgiveness, for people could not go on with their lives with so much anger in their hearts.

Hermes and Audora rushed to Idnar. People were all in frenzy. "People of Idnar, please calm down! Please, tell me what is wrong?" Audora asked politely but with a stern overtone in her voice.

The people told Audora how Zues killed their family, friends and foes. They explained how angry they were, and trust me they had a good reason why to be angry.

Audora told them of how her father ran out on her and her mother, and how they had to fend for themselves through poverty and hardships. The people had compassion for Audora. She told them of how she forgave her father, the unforgivable, and moved on. She told them by not forgiving someone for their bad deed, ~~it~~ just builds hostility and anger in their hearts, and that just gives power to the person who wronged you. The people contemplated what Audora said and realized that Audora was right!

So the people prayed to Zues and forgave him. Zues flew down from the heavens with a tear in his eye and apologized to the people for his horrible deed. He explained
